• I think the assignments are unique and challenging. It may be a function of this being a more advanced course compared to my previous classes, but I found it challenging but appropriate to move from evaluating my assignments on whether or not my code functioned to assessing the professionalism and proficiency of my code. I feel that is a necessary move to ensuring I will be ready for internships and employment. My one complaint is that I wish assessments (quizzes) were had a little more lag time. I'm not advocating necessarily for midterms and finals, but rather I wish the quizzes were further reinforcing the homework assignments due that week rather than the previous class. I recognize that is entirely subjective point of view, but repetition is the key to adult learning. Perhaps quizzes could reach back two lessons instead of one? That would get at what I am suggesting.

• This class utilizes both quizzes and assignments very well. Not too much stress while still challenging us.

• Assignments were good and understandable

• Very strong assignments (which I would consider to be "hands on" activities). They require a lot of thought and a little research. I think my only complaint here is that sometimes I was unclear on the business rules for assignments. If it isn't explicitly stated, I wasn't sure whether or not adding an instance variable or a method was appropriate even if the most efficient and/or intuitive solution would involve doing one or both. I may have missed it, but perhaps some more prominent standing business rules with clearly delineated exceptions would help. Perhaps even better may simply be boilerplate language in the questions document for each assignment which gave the parameters to work within each file we code within. For example: "In example.java you MAY/MAY NOT add instance variables. You MAY/MAY NOT create custom methods. You MAY/MAY NOT import existing java libraries (excluding abc.xyz.util). Do not alter or add code below the comment marked ." Otherwise, as stated, I love the added difficulty in the assignments as compared with previous classes.

• In class we have write the code

- Professor Khemani is easily one of the best instructors at LWTech, and I say that as someone who has generally been pleased with my teachers here. He has an impressive resume backed by his performance in the classroom. He clearly has a passion for teaching and I think will only continue to improve upon his already impressive teaching methods. LWTech would be worse and absolutely foolish to not keep him on!
- Wonderful professor! Shows genuine concern/curiosity about his class. Wonderful classwork!
- The teacher knows what he doing, and he can explain the lesson on his own way, it was funn, but the most good thing he is trying to teach everybody asking to everyone
